Heritage Gas takes delivery of the largest Quad Axle CNG trailers in the World

SCARBOROUGH - FIBA Canning Inc. announced today the delivery of the largest Quad Axle compressed natural gas (CNG) Super Jumbo tube trailers in the world to Heritage Gas of Nova Scotia.

Heritage Gas is a customer-focused natural gas distributor committed to building a safe, viable and accessible natural gas distribution system in Nova Scotia, including the distribution of CNG to customers via a 'pipeline on wheels'. "Through our leading technology for CNG, Heritage Gas will be servicing large industrial and institutional customers via custom built tube trailers," said Ken Canning, Vice President of Sales for FIBA Canning.

The trailers are the largest quad axle jumbo tube trailers in the world and are each capable of hauling nearly 300,000 standard cubic feet of CNG. The trailers contain 14 jumbo tubes each and have a water volume of nearly 36,842 litres. The UN rated tubes are manufactured in accordance with ISO standard 11120 and approved by Transport Canada.

"Heritage Gas is well on its way to being operational for its first CNG shipments in May. We are very excited about receiving our first batch of CNG trailers and beginning to use them as another means of getting gas to customers in Nova Scotia," said Jim Bracken, President of Heritage Gas.

FIBA Canning Inc. is an Ontario based company formed to service the compressed gas industry. FIBA Canning is a privately owned family business and has been building and servicing high pressure gas trailers for more than 30 years, supplying governmental, military, nuclear, energy and industrial gas companies.

Heritage Gas Limited is a Nova Scotia-based company formed for the purpose of operating a full regulation natural gas distribution franchise in Nova Scotia. In 2012 alone, Heritage Gas customers saved over $70 million. Heritage Gas now reaches more than 20,000 residences and businesses throughout Nova Scotia. Heritage Gas is owned by AltaGas Utility Group Inc., an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of AltaGas Limited (TSX:ALA) (TSX:ALA.PR.A) (TSX:ALA.PR.U).
